

Martin Audio US Open Day 2024

Martin Audio US has announced its next Open Day. This will take place at Bridgestone Arena in Nashville on September 30, with separate presentations at both 11am and 2pm. Hosted by VP Sales, Lee Stein, the event will showcase highlights from Martin Audio's current portfolio, with audio demonstrations and presentations by vertical market specialists, Brad Berridge and Brad Stephens.

Beginning with their latest range of passive coaxial point source speakers, FlexPoint, and the powered counterpart CDD-LIVE, they will then progress through to the specialist 3-way 15" speaker of THS, onto the constant curvature series, TORUS and finish with a complement of Wavefront Precision optimized line arrays, all supported by performance subwoofers including cardioid SXC115 and SXC118, as well as SXH218, capable of 148dB peak. peak. In addition they will have XE stage wedges on parade.

The entire Martin Audio US team will be on hand to answer any questions, and refreshments and snacks will be provided throughout. Registration is at the website

The move to Nashville for this latest event had been a strategic one, said Stein. “We are proud to say we have our strongest ever line-up of products and we want to showcase them to production companies - corporate, national and regional - as well as integrators, churches and the local education markets,” he said. “There is a high concentration of all the above in Nashville. It’s important for us to demonstrate how Martin Audio can solve both every day and unique challenges that they are faced with.”
